

NEWARK: BANK SETTLES BIAS LAWSUIT Fleet Bank has settled a discrimination suit brought by a Sikh businessman who wears a beard and a turban and who was turned away when he tried to obtain a certificate of deposit. Fleet, the state's largest banking company, reached the settlement on Friday, the same day it pledged to recognize the religious rights of Sikhs to wear turbans and beards. The settlement stems from a religious discrimination suit filed by Inderjeet Singh Chowdhary, 45, who claimed that employees at the bank's Carteret branch refused to let him buy a $250,000 certificate of deposit and asked him to leave. Mr. Chowdhary, an American citizen, will be paid an undisclosed sum under the confidential settlement, said his lawyer, Ravinder S. Bhalla. (AP)
